ABIGAIL F.

Abigail F. is seeking a scholarship for the Master of Arts in Biblical Counseling (MABC) program at Dallas Theological Seminary to help her become better equipped to become a Licensed Professional Counselor (LPC) to minister to women in rehabilitation. A strong biblical and theological foundation will give her a solid understanding of the character of God, humanity, and relationships, and give her tools to integrate biblical truth into a counseling setting to foster hope in dark and painful circumstances.

I am passionate about my calling because I have experienced healing in my own journey from the care of other people. God has used friendships and communities to encourage me and build me up. I went through counseling as a young adult to find healing in the areas of my childhood sexual abuse and family trauma. I have deeply experienced the light of Jesus. I am passionate about helping people find Him in their story.” — ABIGAIL F.

Amanda E. is seeking a scholarship for the Master of Arts in Christian Leadership (MACL) program at Dallas Theological Seminary to help her become better equipped to build church planting teams and leaders. At her church, Grace Church, they develop and launch teams to plant and revitalize churches across Albuquerque, New Mexico, the United States, and the world. She is eager to see new churches planted, and believes that her role in the future will be to create ways to prepare church planters and pastors.

I am passionate about my calling because the Lord gave me a vision of His Spirit moving mightily, like a swiftly moving water rolling downhill, in ways that just our one church cannot contain. He called me to prepare channels for His Spirit's movement. I am preparing so that I can help connect existing churches and send prepared pastors for future churches. It is my passion and my calling to create systems and networks for His Spirit to move.” — AMANDA E.

Ashlei E. is seeking a scholarship for the Master of Biblical and Theological Studies (MBTS) program at Dallas Theological Seminary to help her become better equipped to serve women, organizations, and institutions through Christian Education and Leadership Development. She has been entrusted with opportunities to uplift and encourage women while instilling biblical truths in the hearts and minds of women and children through biblical literacy and education.

I am passionate about my calling because I understand the importance of cultivating community and collaborating to fulfill more for God. I've served in leadership for many ministries and one common trend I've recognized is ministries functioning in isolation. Sadly, doing this causes ministries to dismiss the importance of collaborating to make a greater impact. God has connected me to many ministry leaders and although I did not understand it in the beginning, he soon showed me how those connections would serve as partnerships to fulfill Kingdom work."

Her desire is to also develop an App for children that are Deaf/Hard of Hearing (DHH) to learn and read books in Sign language.

I am passionate about my calling because there is not much out there for these groups. Since being in seminary and learning what different words, concepts, and phrases mean, I've noticed other sign language interpreters interpreting it in the wrong way. They interpret the word but not the meaning. I decided I want to train sign language interpreters to interpret the meaning of what they are hearing so it would help DHH attendees when they come to a Christian event. I want to be a part of the solution to have more qualified sign language interpreters for Christian events to reach the population of DHH people so they can learn about the Triune God."

I am passionate about my calling because the call to this direction was so audible and ordained by the Lord. He was slowly and is continuing to slowly mold and shape my heart for a life of serving in the counseling realm. I remember feeling the Spirit moving so boldly in me through my career prior to going into full-time seminary as He was forming my heart and mind to look into the hearts and whole beings of others just as He looks at us. One night I had a dream and the Lord boldly declared counseling over my life. I had no clue what it was, but I knew in my bones that how He was moving was shaping me for this. Since then, I have been full force ahead and open to whatever this life journey has in store because a “yes” to Him is worth it!” —

*I am passionate about my calling because God undoubtedly called me to this. He called me out of my dark places and showed me His glorious light. He could have left me in shambles because of my sin, but He didn't. He picked me out and cleaned me up. The only option is to serve Him wholeheartedly. He told me to be a scholar of His Word, to know it, to teach it, and to spread it to the masses. Since 2019 that has been my heart's desire. The Lord has to get glory out of this life—out of my life because that is why He created me. I have seen the Lord be faithful countless times, so He deserves nothing less from His chosen servants on the earth. Because of this I am passionate about what the Lord has called me to do. God placed the calling on my heart to work with children and teens. My desire is to fulfill this calling while serving in a children's church started in my youth. I am inspired by the life and passion of children. This led to me volunteering in church in my twenties. I desire to continue on this path by helping children develop a godly character and encouraging the next generation of Christians to walk with God throughout adulthood. My work with children will help develop the necessary firm foundation for a godly life. Our world is morally depraved and living a God-centered life can be difficult without the right foundation and proper support. I am passionate about my calling because I am post-abortive. Scripture teaches that our Creator God knows us before we are knit together in our mother's womb. He has made us in His image and given each human intrinsic value ("Your eyes saw my unformed body; all the days ordained for me were written in Your book before one of them came to be" (Psalm 139:16 NIV). Scripture also teaches that "he who conceals his sins does not prosper, but whoever confesses and renounces them, finds mercy" (Proverbs 28:13). Post-abortive men and women need to know that they do not have to walk in shame and darkness. The healing power of the Holy Spirit is available to those who confess their sins (James 5:16a), and when we confess our sins, "God is faithful and just to forgive us and cleanse us of all unrighteousness" (1 John 1:9)." — LAKESA R.

God is faithful to all generations of His children. My father recalls that, at age 6, I wanted to become a preacher, like him. He prayed for me and God answered his prayers. Uncertain of God's plan for me, I went to law school. After a couple of years of practicing law, God called me to serve Him full-time by opening a door for me to work in ministry and enroll in seminary. A few years ago, I lost all of my grandparents and learned of my mother's breast cancer diagnosis. I was heartbroken and confused. My faith was challenged. During that season, God showed me that He's sovereign, He's intentional, and He can bring beauty from ashes. Today, I am learning to teach the Word of God impactfully to the next generation for change. My passion is for my Millennials and future Generation Z. I am the Bible Study Curriculum Developer for Second Baptist Church and an intern at Inspire Women. I want to convince young women that God is who He says He is, and that they are who He says they are. After losing my baby, I wanted to extend God's love to the children of His church and effectively communicate biblical principles to young women to change the world."

*I am passionate about my calling because after going through an abusive relationship and being an unbeliever, I never imagined that I would go back to school or that I would be studying the Bible at the level that I am. Every day that I get to study, go to class, or work on an assignment, I am just grateful that God redeemed my life and has allowed me to be a part of His plans for humanity. The burden I have to spur other believers toward living a life that counts, is rooted in the death of my 27-year old sister. After losing someone all of a sudden, my gaze was transfixed on eternal things and the burden to run a race wholeheartedly, not letting Satan drag me down, became a motivation. Furthermore, after mentoring a very confused 13 year old girl and seeing God change her, I believed in mentorship and saw the power of community and companionship come alive. I am passionate about my calling because for years I have wrestled with needing and wanting more out of life but was not sure of my purpose. I was not really sure about why I felt so 'unfulfilled' in life. I noticed during one season of my life, I just couldn't get enough of church and learning God's Word. One night I had a dream that I was standing in the pulpit at my church preaching. About a year later, a minister approached me after a Bible study and said that she had a message that she felt the Holy Spirit had laid on her heart for me. She handed me a pink envelope that she had written notes down. There was more to the story, but these events were the beginning for me that I was being called into ministry." — MICHELLE S.

I am passionate about my calling because so many children don't have control of what adults can do to them. Children have so much joy. They might not know how evil the world is yet, but they have something within them that shows hope. Every moment I am with children I am filled with joy and laughter. Through building relationships with children, specifically orphans, I want to share with them the joy of the Lord and knowing Him. I want to create more orphan homes that are safe and partnered with the church. I imagine several more safe orphan houses with Christian parents, specifically in Ukraine, and where they are helping the church lead weekly in their outreach activities and camps. I am passionate about my calling because God has taken what was absolutely broken and desolate in my own life and restored me. I come from a broken home with a drug addict mother and an alcoholic father who were absent most of my childhood. I was the oldest of five and took on a motherly role. Every abuse imaginable I have endured. At the age of 24 years old, God radically got ahold of my life in a jail cell and since then He has passionately pursued my heart and replaced the brokenness with wholeness in Him. It has been a powerful and difficult journey to recognize and endure the healing process while trusting God to lead the way, but I continue to do it. I truly have a passion for this calling because God has anointed my life through my obedience to Him and I know I am called to be a living testimony of His grace, unconditional love, and deep desire for every one of His children to walk in the freedom, purpose, and power He has for them. My story is His message."

Nicole C. is seeking a scholarship for the Masters of Theology (ThM) program at Dallas Theological Seminary to help her become better equipped to evangelize and serve in missions. Her approach to ministry is very much focused on relationships. She believes that we must first know, love, and listen to those we serve. In her work with homeless people and youth, she has seen the power of showing true respect and love to people. When we form true relationships, people open up and are more likely to receive the gospel message.

I am passionate about my calling because I grew up in a neighborhood with lots of Muslim families. After 9/11, I saw how some of my classmates were mistreated by people in the community. One little girl was only 12 years old when she told of how a car almost ran her over in the street, refusing to stop for a girl wearing a hijab. I've seen how kind and faithful many Muslim people are, and how earnestly they try to serve God. I want to help introduce them to Jesus, and see their lives transformed by His love and forgiveness.” — NICOLE C.
